

Pacioli (sometimes Paccioli or Paclolo; c. 1447 – 19 June 1517) was an Italian mathematician. He is referred to as "The Father of Accounting and Bookkeeping" in Europe and he was the second person to publish a work on the double-entry system accounting method used in parts of Italy. This revolutionized how businesses oversaw their operations, enabling improved efficiency and profitability. The Summa's section on accounting was used internationally as an accounting textbook up to the mid-16th century. The essentials of double-entry accounting have for the most part remain unchanged for over 500 years.

"Accounting practitioners in public accounting, industry and not-for-profit organizations, as well as investors, lending institutions, business firms, and all other users for financial information are indebted to Luca Pacioli for his monumental role in the development of accounting." The ICAEW Library's rare book collection at Chartered Accountants' Hall holds the complete published works of Luca Pacioli. Sections of two of Pacioli's books, "Summa de arithmetica" and "Divina proportione" can be viewed online using turning the pages, an interactive tool developed by the British Library.

One of the major contributions of Paciolo was a book on accounting that brought revolution in this field. His discoveries and detailed works were on

1. Ethics of accounting
2. The rule of 72 (A method of determining economic returns)
3. Use of ledgers, Journals and Bookkeeping
4. Structure of Balance sheet and Income statement
5. The method of Venice
